Internships

JargonBust is looking for summer and fall interns to cover the following topics:
1. World Politics
2. The Economy
3. Business and Technology
4. Lifestyle

Responsibilities
• Update JargonBust’s content daily
• Maintain JargonBust’s social media accounts
• Pitch ideas for new articles
• Perform research as assigned by editors
• Curate short posts that readers would like to share

Requirements:
• Interest in generating ideas and/or respond to stories in our editorial calendar;
• Expertise in use of social media to draw and engage readers – an understanding of Twitter, Facebook, Instagram, Vine, Tumblr, Snapchat;
• Experience meeting deadlines and manage your own time, ideally with a college newspaper or online publication;
• Experience working internationally and foreign languages are a plus.

Most your daily work will involve:
1. Putting together 3-5 short (300-500 words) curated articles on one of our four focus areas. You would be expected to include attributed quotes from direct sources;
2. Pitching ideas for curated articles;
3. Working on a 1 weekly original article (600-800 words) with at least 2 original and attributed quotes from direct sources.

If interested, please email us at editor@jargonbust.com with the following:
1. Your resume;
2. Short cover letter;
3. Links to relevant clips of your work;
4. Your blog, Twitter account, Tumblr and any other social media aspects to your life that you feel are interesting.

Internships are remote and unpaid.
About JargonBust

JargonBust is a new online media company that tells global stories by cutting through the noise. Our stories explain what is taking place around the world without having to explain how the US is or may be affected. We let you decide how these stories affect your life and the world around you.
